THE SUFFRAGISTS

Proceedings at the Sessions of the Convention Today.

REPORTS SUBMITTED

A Memorial Service Commemorating Deceased Workers.

WILL ADJOURN TOMORROW

The convention of the National American Woman Suffrage Association got to work bright and early this morning, for, as an adjournment will probably be reached by tomorrow evening, the convention finds itself still with a good deal of business to be gone through with.

An afternoon session was held for the election of officers and action upon resolutions, but a recess was taken at 2:30 to enable the members of the convention to attend a reception given by Mrs. John R. McLean, when they had an opportunity to meet Mrs. Grant on the occasion of her seventieth birthday.

The first business of the morning after prayer and the reading of the minutes was the report of the chairman of the committee on railroads, Miss Mollie G. Hay, and she was given a rising vote of thanks as an expression of the feeling entertained for her by the delegates for her services in securing reduced rates and other advantended to them. In his opinion the signs of the times warranted him in prophesying that in some of the states at least women will have the chance of voting in the presidential election of 1900.

Following Mr. Blackwell several of the delegates made informal reports of what had been done in this line during the past year in their respective states. One of the strongest arguments against giving the right of suffrage to women, it was pointed out, was made out of the claim that women as a rule do not exercise the right to vote for school officers, etc., wherever they possess it. This claim, they said, was not well founded, but even so, it was urged that women should take the fullest advantage of their opportunities and prevent the men politicians from making use of the men politic

The Legi

Mrs. Lillie Devereux Blake reported for the legislative committee, giving a number of valuable hints and suggestions to the delegates on the matter of conducting campaigns against state legislatures in the battle for suffrage. She argued that suffrage societies can accomplish most when they are organized along political lines.

Mrs. Blake supplemented her report with a paper entitled "Legislative Advice," say-ng, in part:

"At the annual meeting of the Nationa

American Woman Suffrage Association, held at Atlanta, Ga., in February, 1825, a committee on legislative advice was appointed. This committee was formed for the purpose of giving information as to the est methods of conducting legislative campaigns, advising how to secure the passage of laws, and suggesting measures which may be pushed for the benefit of women Each member of the committee has had legislative experience, and, after consultation, they offer the following plan of work "Those who have never conducted a legislative campaign are prone to think that the efforts should begin as soon as the legislature convenes; while, to secure success, the work should be half done by that time. Every woman who is interested in Each member of the committee has had time. Every woman who is interested in such a campaign should begin her labor: such a campaign should begin her labor: months before the election, by ascertaining who will be the probable candidates o both parties, seeing these men, and obtaining from them pledges of support. When a man is willing thus to aid the cause, every effort must be made to secure, first, his nomination, and then his election. At the nominating conventions of all parties delegations of women should urge the naming of their candidates and the passage of reso-lutions favoring woman suffrage. When the campaign has really begun, public meet ings must be held and documents distrib-uted in the interest of their chosen candi dates. Nothing will so speedily bring above women's enfranchisement as the proof that we already possess political influence, and will use it for our friends. "When the legislature assembles, the strongest man in the party which has a majority in the body must be chosen to present the proposed law. If the republicans have a majority, the leading republican must be asked to champion the cause: if the democrats are in the majority, the leading democrat. The bill should be carefully drawn by some good lawyer who is with legislative usage. In order to secure success it is essential that there be some one at the capitol in charge of the measure, also a committee of women of judgment an discretion either there continuously or fesome days of each week.

"After the bill has passed both houses and is before the governor for signature, attention must be given to securing his favorable action; influential men must be asked to see him in behalf of the measure, and every means used to secure this final success.

"In a state where there is hope of suppor from the political parties, where there has been long agitation and everything points to a favorable result, it is wise to urge a constitutional amendment striking out the word 'male' as a qualification for voters. This must pass both houses in the form of a con-current resolution and does not require the governor's signature. In some states it mus pass two successive legislatures; and ir most states it must be ratified at the polls by a majority of voters.

"When the conditions are not yet ripe for a constitutional amendment, there are many measures which are valuable in arousin; public interest and preparing the way for the firal triumph, as well as important in

THE WEATHER FORECASTS BY FLAG SIGNALS. No. 1. BLUE Local rain or snow. Cold wave.

Explanation of the Flags.

The flags are hoisted each day upon the issue of the morning weather map and float until dark They indicate the weather that may be expected during the following thirty-six hours, but more particularly the last twenty-four hours of that period. They are to be read from the top of the staff Sownward. If more than one kind of weather is predicted for the period from 8 p.m. to 8 p.m. the conditions first named in the forecast will be represented by the uppermost flag. When a warning of a "cold wave" is included in the forecast message, the cold-wave flag will be displayed below the proper weather flag.

The temperature flag, when placed above numbers 1, 2 or 3, indicates warmer weather; when placed below numbers 1, 2 or 3, indicates colder weather; when not displayed, the indications are that the temperature will remain stationary.

"For general agitation, all women who desire their political freedom should send individual petitions to the legislature asking for their own political liberty.

"Strict watch should be kept on all legislative action, and protests should be sent in, when any laws are proposed inimical to the rights of women. Especially bills proposing to change the statutes regulating marriage and divorce should be looked after, and the demand made that they be referred to a commission composed of per-sens of both sexes." Rev. Anna H. Shaw introduced, by request, a resolution recommending that the common council of Philadelphia be petitioned to set apart a room in old Independence Hall to be used as a headquarters for the suffrage association. The resolution was received with enthusiasm, but, of necessity, had to be turned over to the resolutions committee for action.

Suffrage in the South.

Miss Laura Clay presented the report of the southern committee. The south, she aid, should be looked upon as the strategic point in the contest for equal suffrage, for n the south the woman movement meets with less hostility than in any other section of the country, with the possible exception of the west. The fight should be for woman suffrage and nothing else. It ought not to be hampered by any side is-Mrs. Caroline B. Buell of Connecticut, for

"It makes no difference what you may be so good as to think, but it is what the out world may think." On motion of Rev. Anna Shaw it was voted to send a telegram of love and greeting to Mrs. Elizabeth Cady Stanton, the honorary president of the association.

A Memorial Service. The remainder of the morning hour was devoted to a memorial service in honor of the suffrage workers who have passed away during the past year. Mrs. Clara B Colby of this city presented a resolution which contained the names of the more dis tinguished of the year's dead. Anna H. Shaw. Mrs. Dietrick used to be the corresponding secretary of the National Association, and secretary of the National Association, and at the time of her death she was the chairman of the national press committee. She and Miss Shaw were the most intimate of friends, and as Miss Shaw is perhaps the best talker at the convention her tribute to the memory of Mrs. Dietrick was eloquent and beautiful in the extreme. There were tears in the eyes of many of the delegates before she had finished.

Saturday's Late Meetings.

At the meeting of the suffrage convention Saturday afternoon the committee on the plan of work for 1896 presented its report. The committee recommended that the standing committee on organization, nominated by the business committee and elected by the convention, be continued; that each lecturer employed by that committee be given the right to stand as an emissary of the association; that each state appoint an organization committee to push the work of such organization. The details of the work for clubs, preparation of printed matter, the appointment of a committee of letter writers, and the

of a committee of letter writers, and the continuation of the National Suffrage Bulletin were all considered favorably in the report. In connection with the financial affairs the committee suggested that $10,000 would be necessary for the work for this year, and that such amount can be resided with proper affort. raised with proper effort. In connection with the report of the committee Miss Anthony read a letter which has been sent to the suffrage clubs in fif-teen or twenty of the states. These letters suggest the formation of suffrage clubs, according to political subdivisions of the states, the purpose being to influence the caucus nominations for all offices.

At the evening session the convention re-

Religious Service Yesterday. A religious service under the auspices of the convention was held yesterday afternoon at the Church of Our Father. Miss Elizabeth M. Yates of Maine presided and offered the invocation. The choir was composed of friends of the association, with Elizabeth Hailman as organist. They rendered "God Through All and in All."
Mrs. Charlotte Perkins Stetson of Cali fornia delivered a scholarly and eloquent address on the subject "The Spiritual Sig-nificance of Democracy and Woman's Relation to It." Convention Notes.

"Aunt Susan" forgot her gavel this mornng, and some one brought her a table croquet mallet to use instead of the jack knife she had borrowed from a man. Some one presented Miss Anthony with bouquet of La France roses.

Hereafter the people who want the autograph of Miss Susan B. Anthony will have to pay for it. She is asked for her autograph thousands of times in each year, and Mrs. Thomas of Maryland suggested that as autographs of this kind bore a commercial value a bureau of autographs be established at national headquarters, where supplies of autographs of the noted we cmen of the suffrage cause will be sold for a consideration, and the money turned over to the association fund.

One of the touching addresses this morning came from Miss Rose E. Lumkin of Hampton, Va. Her skin is dark, but the way handkerchiefs flew up to eyes suggested that her speech was silver, as she asked the prayers and good wishes of the suffrage women for her race and the ad-vancement of their interests. Miss Anthony gave the new members a rap his morning. She said that many of them hought that the suffrage movement had carcely been heard of until they turned their eloquence loose in the cause, "but the fact of the matter is," she said, "not a single new idea, not a new thought, not a single new argument has been advanced in our cause that was not advanced forty ears ago.

A very handsome and lifelike lithograph of Lucy Stone Blackwell was exhibited on the platform on an easel this morning. Miss Anthony said that it was an inspiration to ook at it. Mrs. Orra Lo horne of Culpeper, and resident of the Virginia Suffrage Association, is one of the "new women" of the south. "We are so conservative, you know," she said, with that delicious slow trawl that women of the south have to perfection, "and we are not up to date in everything, but we are getting there. Some people have said to me that it is not the proper thing for a woman to desire to the proper thing for a woman to desire to vote, that it is only people who desire to toriety and a name and who engage in agilation. But I tell them that the Langhornes have been here in the Shenandoah alley for over 200 years, and they do not eed to seek for either one. Suffrage to women in the south would give life to our old blood and bring a new era of prosperi-y. It is coming, too." Mrs. Langhorne is iceply interested in having the University of Virginia opened to women. She is visit-ing the public schools in various parts of Virginia, lecturing on "The Relation of Our Public Schools to the State of Virginia," hoping to rouse interest in the desired change. Although excluded from the university, Virginia women are being solicited to aid in the rebuilding of it. Mrs. Langhorne thinks that is a good deal like "taxation without representation."

. THE FORESTRY ASSOCIATION.

Interesting Addresses Delivered by

Prominent Public Men. The joint meeting of the American Forestry Association and the National Geographical Society Friday evening was an occasion of more than passing interest, since it showed the growth of an idea that has been slow of acceptance by the American mind. Five years ago, had any one asked the chairmen of the Senate and House committees on public lands for a public expression of opinion favoring the enactment of an administrative forest law for the public domain, he would in all probability have been laughed at. In this brief period, then, public opinion has accepted the notion of forest protection. It is true that this matter of forest protection was broached much more than five years ago. The American forestry congress held its first session fifteen years ago, but, as was intimated at the Friday evening meeting, that assemblage was regarded as a gathering of sentimentalists. Congressman McRae, the especial cham pion of forestry interests in the House told of his conversion to the movement He said when Dr. Fernow first came to him with a long bill that he wanted en-acted for the protection of the forests of the public domain he had little interest in the matter. But committees of men whose chief characteristic was common talked forest protection to the public lands committee, and he found that the forest idea was a strongly practical one. It forced his attention, it commanded his re-spect and soon it found in him an enthu-Tree Love in Arkansas.

"I have nothing to say about her," anwered Miss Anthony, "except that for ears she has been compelled to pose as the typical strong minded woman. Senator Dubois carried his hearers far away to the wooded slopes and shady valleys of the Coeur d'Alene, in his own state of Idaho. The Senator showed an intimate acquaintance with the natural resources of his great young state, and a keen apprecia-tion of the unique value of her forests, which he rated even higher than her great mineral wealth. Not only are the moun-tain forests valuable in themselves, but they are the reservoirs of all the streams of the state, and these furnish the only means of irrigation, without which agri-Speaking of the relation of the people of Idaho and the mountain states generally to the forests on the public domain, Mr. Dubois said: "It is so much easier to regard the government as an entity here in Washington, where massive buildings and thousands of workers give it a personality, than in the west, where only thousands of unoccuried acres remind one of its ex-istence." And hence government property is anybody's property. The Senator said that while the preservation of western for-ests would prove difficult, he regarded it as essential to the prosperity of the western states, and sincerely hoped some ef-fective law might be enacted by the pres-
